

Abstract

A computer includes a processor, position determining means for determining the location of the computer, and control means for controlling the operation of the processor.

- 5 The control means are in communication with the position determining means and control the operation of the processor in response to location information provided to the control means by the position determining means.